From nameless goblins to software fairies, Japanese popular representations of anthropomorphic creatures are imaginative and often useful. What does this phenomenon tell us about Japanese thought and culture? This lecture will examine some of the countless mascot kyara ‘characters’ who live mostly outside the covers of manga and anime and discuss their domestic and globalized contexts.

Debra J. Occhi, a linguistic anthropologist, is a Professor of Anthropology at Miyazaki International College. Her current research topic is Japanese mascot characters (kyara), and her research interests include aesthetics, ideology, gender, regionality, cognition, and emotion in popular culture. Her publications on the Japanese kyara phenomenon include “Wobbly Aesthetics, Performance, and Message: Comparing Japanese Kyara with their Anthropomorphic Forebears”, and “Sloppy Selfhood: Metaphor, Embodiment, Animism, and Anthropomorphization”. Her forthcoming work includes analyses of Kumamon, of kyaraben (decorated box lunches), and of the U900 ukulele band.
